

During 2013, we continued to organize our work according to our new mission statement: “We empower Utahns to improve their communities through active engagement in the humanities.”

We believe that the humanities can improve communities in real ways. We see our role as being one of catalyst in helping to bring humanities ideas to life in engaging, fresh, and impactful projects.

One thing you’ll notice in this annual report is that our programs are now organized into “centers.” Each center serves as a focal point for empowering Utahns to improve their communities, with the emphasis of putting humanities ideas into action.

Many thanks to the array of donors and partners who make this work possible. With their generous and ongoing support, we can continue being a platform for free, statewide, humanities-focused projects.
